Bradley A. Olsen has been active in the area of international real estate investment for nearly 30 years. During that time, he has represented investors from the U.S., Germany, The Netherlands, the U.K., Canada and Japan on transactions valued in excess of $5 billion. He serves as President of Atlantic Partners, Ltd.

Prior to forming Atlantic Partners, Mr. Olsen was a principal of Richard Ellis, Inc., the US affiliate of a major international real estate advisory firm, and a shareholder of the international holding company. At Richard Ellis, he served as the director of the firm's investment advisory group which advised domestic and international investors.

Mr. Olsen was a founder and principal of The Lexington Company, a Chicago-based independent real estate investment advisory and consulting firm. His responsibilities included acquisitions and dispositions, asset management and property finance. Richard Ellis acquired the company in 1989.

From 1980 through 1983, Mr. Olsen served as senior vice president and regional manager of the Chicago office of Richard Ellis, Inc. He supervised real estate acquisitions, dispositions and management in the Midwest and was responsible for the firm's business development efforts nationwide.

Before joining Richard Ellis, Mr. Olsen was a practicing real estate lawyer. He served as general counsel of a real estate development and construction company and was in private practice. His assignments involved various aspects of real estate development, financing and property management.

Mr. Olsen is a graduate of Princeton University and Harvard Law School. He is the author of numerous articles on international real estate investment and is a frequent lecturer at leading universities and professional conferences, including Expo Real. Mr. Olsen is a member of the Association of Foreign Investors in Real Estate ("AFIRE").
